

The Fox and the Forest

Who are we?

Where are we going?

What do we fear?

And we lived in a world that was evil.

A world that was like a great black ship pulling away from the shore of sanity and civilization, roaring its black horn in the night, taking two billion people with it, whether they wanted to go or not, to death, to fall over the edge of the earth and the sea into radioactive flame and madness.