

Time

The stars were floating like sparrows in flight the night we were heading for home
All our search for truth all our touch with the pain
All our reasons expired in flames

Time went on and time will tell
and time exposed the well
Time went on through nights and day's so strange

The flies were crouching so close to your eye their wings were trembling with lies That moments when secrets and trust were retired Replaced with fraud and denial

Time went on and time will tell
and time exposed the well
Time went on through nights and day's so strange

The sea changed its will and desire the night you were floating back home Its surface exploded in flames without fire
As the last of your flesh were reborn

Time went on and time will tell
and time exposed the well
Time went on through nights and day's so strange